

Concealment Method: Hidden in Plain Sight: Hexagon Gun Clock

A shooting and sporting catalog and internet company offers the pictured clock for sale via the internet and retails for around $40 dollars. The clock looks like an ordinary clock however; its hollow interior holds most semi auto handguns and most revolvers. Just open the hinged front for quick access when moments count. Solid wood frame with dark oak finish, in a handsome hexagon design that fits in anywhere. Accurate movement runs on one AA battery (not included), has a sweep second hand. 15 1/4 x 4" deep. Weighs 7 lbs. Comes with wall mounting screws.

On a related note, objects like these are why officers should never allow someone being taken into custody to go in a room by themselves. Typically, the request to do so is accompanied by “just for a minute to change my clothes” or some other modesty related issue which makes an officer choose between safety and moral choices about those in custody, but not yet convicted of a crime.
